Foreword

At the heart of the Church's mandate is the call to make disciples of all nations, to spread the Word, to work in the fields that are ripe for harvest, to call in the full number of God's elect, to preach the gospel of the Kingdom in the whole world as a testimony to all nations for His glory.

It is a grand task. One that should excite us, stir us, humble us, move us, and challenge us to greater faithfulness in proclaiming His most precious salvation to a sinful and lost world. One that will demand much of us as we labour in prayer and planning, expending our energies and resources, and directing those called through God's people into avenues of service. It is a task in which we should spare nothing, for ultimately it has to do not only with the saving of individuals (a most wonderful and high calling in itself), but the advance of the Kingdom of God and the hastening of the day of our Lord's coming.

As a denomination we share a desire to take this task seriously. Over the years we have supported missionaries and mission works in a number of different ways and have established various guidelines and directives for the work of mission.

The purpose of this Handbook is to pull some of that work together and enlarge on it, in order to give as much direction and encouragement as possible to churches and individuals.

In the pages that follow you will find a range of material: policy statements including those from our Acts of Synod; practical suggestions for the development of mission awareness in our churches; guidelines for Sessions as they promote the work of mission in the local church; practical help and advice for those that receive the call to Mission work; information on finances; information on training; short-term mission work, and so on.

This Handbook therefore goes out with the earnest prayer that it will be a very useful tool for churches, sessions and individuals. We pray that it will stimulate mission consciousness and faithfulness, as well as challenge sessions, committees and individuals alike to a greater heart for missions, to the glory of God.

Section 1: Introduction

• The Command

Jesus commands the church to be engaged in mission work!

"And Jesus came up and spoke to them, saying, 'All authority has been given to Me in heaven and on earth. Go therefore and make disciples of all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Spirit. and teaching them to obey everything I have commanded you. And surely I am with you always, to the very end of the age,' " (Matthew 28:18-20).

"But you shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come upon you; and you shall be My witnesses both in Jerusalem, and in all Judea and Samaria, and even to the remotest part of the earth" (Acts 1:8).

• Objectives of Mission Work

- That the one true and living Triune God be glorified, praised and worshipped.
- That the gospel of God's salvation be proclaimed in its fullness to "every tribe, language, people and nation" (Rev 5:9), in order that the unbelieving be warned of eternal punishment and by God's grace repent, believe, be baptised and discipled, to live redeemed lives.
- That along with the primary focus - gospel proclamation, we seek to minister to the totality of human need. (Matthew 25:31-46)
- That, where appropriate, a result of our missionary endeavours should be that indigenous Reformed Churches be established or assisted.

- Mission Strategy

The OMB priority for missions is partnership with Reformed Churches and their mission agencies worldwide in equipping, establishing and training local churches and their leaders.

- The priority for such partnerships will be those with RCNZ Sister Church and other International Council of Reformed Churches (ICRC) member federations.
- RCNZ Synod 1998 decided to ‘affirm that the primary focus of our interest in developing opportunities within the ICRC should be in the Asia- Pacific region.’ (Acts of Synod Article 63.5)
- Within this strategy there are various types of mission works. The priority areas for the OMB are:
  - First: Direct Gospel proclamation, equipping and training church leaders. This includes as highest priority, ordained ministers of the Gospel.
  - Second: Specialist Diaconal ministries that accompany the work of the First priority area.
  - Third: Shorter term assistance roles that support ministries of missionaries and/or local churches.

- Purpose of a Missions’ Policy for the local church, OMB and Synod

The purpose of this policy is to guide, aid and assist the local churches of the RCNZ and the OMB in their decisions regarding mission work, specifically:

- To help achieve a clear sense of direction in the church's mission involvement.
- To avoid making important decisions on an emotional, or haphazard basis.
- To guide and inform prospective mission workers.
- To promote consistency within session (and their missions committees) and between churches of the RCNZ.
- To aid session's efforts to be good stewards of the missions budget.
- The OMB will review the Missions Handbook every three years.

- Support for Missionaries Having Strong Ties with the RCNZ

The OMB may investigate and report to the churches with a proposal to partially support missionaries in service (preferably with an ICRC or sister church), who have strong ties with the Reformed Churches of New Zealand (See Appendix 2 for the relevant synodical regulations). Any such proposal must have the support of at least two-thirds of the churches. However, the OMB must give priority in funding to personnel from within our own churches.

Section 2: Synod, OMB and their tasks

- The Work of Synod

Pursuant to Art.51 of the Church Order, and proceeding upon the principle that Synod shall control mission work which demands denominational co-operation:

- Synod determines the fields where mission work is to be done and makes final decisions regarding the expansion or retrenchment of the work.
- Synod determines the annual budget for the work, designating the quota (see Section 8.4) of the churches.
- Synod appoints the members of the Overseas Mission Committee, which is called the Overseas Mission Board (OMB).

- The Overseas Mission Board (OMB)

The OMB acts as an agent of Synod under delegated authority. It carries out Synodical decisions pertaining to overseas missions.

The OMB shall be constituted as a national body, but the core (or executive committee) is to be located in the Christchurch area..

Liaisons (who need not be OMB members) are appointed by the Presbyteries, and function as a link between the OMB and the churches in those Presbyteries where there are no members of the OMB. They inform the churches at each Presbytery meeting of the work of the board.

The members of the OMB elect from among themselves a chairman, a secretary and a treasurer. The OMB meets at least once every 3 months. All decisions of the board are recorded in its minutes, copies of which are sent to all members and liaisons. The board regularly communicates with the churches on its work and the work of the missionaries by publishing news reports it receives through the bulletins and Faith in Focus.

- The Work of the OMB

The tasks of the OMB are as follows:

- To identify and evaluate overseas mission opportunities for the denomination and churches.
- To make plans and formulate strategies for the exploration and development of new overseas mission fields and endeavours for the denomination.

- To formulate policies and guidelines regarding overseas mission work.
- To promote mission work within the denomination by keeping them informed of news and needs (refer to article 2.4).
- To give advice to sending churches or those considering sending a missionary.
- To determine, in conjunction with the sending churches, the suitability of those being considered for denominational overseas mission work.
- To ensure that denominational missionaries on the field are being adequately supported through the sending churches. A “denominational missionary” refers to a missionary being supported by the denomination through quota.
- To help resolve misunderstandings and conflicts that may arise between sending churches and missionaries.
- To intervene where a sending church or denominational missionary is acting improperly, negligently or in any way clearly contrary to God’s Word or the interests of the denomination.
- To manage property and funds entrusted to it, raise funds and acquire property, and ensure that they are used and applied as directed by Synod.
- To carry out the mandate and any tasks given by Synod.
- To report to Synod.

To do this, the OMB:

- Is authorised to hold and convey property and control all moneys raised for, donated or bequeathed to it as an agent of Synod.
- May work or co-operate with other Reformed mission agencies either by supporting these agencies financially or by providing personnel.
- May make arrangements (whether short or long-term) with non-denominational agencies that are not explicitly Reformed (refer to Section 10 on Secondment). However, the Board’s main focus should always be towards agencies of a Reformed persuasion.

• Communication between the OMB and the churches generally

The OMB has contact with a variety of Reformed denominational mission agencies and churches enabling it to:

- Make known and sponsor needs on the mission fields.
- Provide news and insights into various aspects of overseas mission work through various publications (e.g. newsletters and Faith in Focus).

- Investigate and advertise fields and openings for mission workers, especially within the family of confessional Reformed Churches, via agencies such as the International Council of Reformed Churches (ICRC).

The churches are encouraged to communicate with the OMB. There may be opportunities or needs which the churches or church members may wish to communicate.

Section 3: Responsibilities of the Local Session

The initial steps of the missionary enterprise occur in the context of the local church. Is the session aware of these steps and prepared to take the initiative?

- Fostering Mission Awareness

It is the responsibility of each local session:

To inform, educate and inspire the church on matters relating to cross-cultural missions, and to draw attention to the existence of the Missions' Policy Handbook, the RCNZ website and other helpful resources on missions, and to be proactive in advertising mission openings with Reformed Churches or agencies.

- Guiding Potential Candidates

When a person or family makes it known to their elder or session that they desire to serve the Lord on the mission field, it is exciting! The spiritual leadership of the church will want to both nurture and test this desire, to see if it proves genuine.

It is the responsibility of each local session:

- To guide and encourage, with due discernment, those who show a desire to go to the mission field.
- To counsel prospective candidates in regard to suitable training (see Section 6).
- To help evaluate suitable opportunities for service, steering them towards openings with Reformed churches/agencies wherever possible.
- To be prepared to recruit and send out (in liaison with OMB) suitable individuals from the local church.
- To arrange, together with active assistance from the OMB, financial support for those they are sending out. (See Section 8 "Policy on Financial Support", especially 8.3)

Sessions are encouraged to seek any necessary assistance from the OMB with respect to these tasks. It is recommended that sessions appoint an individual or small group (e.g. missions committee member(s) plus an elder and a deacon, with one person as the key contact) to support members involved in missions. Every effort should be made to ensure continuity in the support group throughout the entire process.

It should be noted that the OMB's ability to support candidates is constrained to an extent by its mandates and its resources. The OMB does not and cannot support individuals without the backing and request of the local church. Several criteria must be met before the OMB can second personnel to non-Reformed mission agencies (see Section 10), noting also the RCNZ focus and OMB priority (Section 1) for overseas mission.

To this end the OMB seeks to advise the churches of short-term and long-term mission openings with Reformed agencies. Sessions are encouraged to assist the OMB in this task if they discover or are made aware of opportunities for mission workers.

Individuals (after advising their session and seeking counsel from them) are encouraged to contact the OMB at the earliest opportunity if considering mission work.

• Before They Leave

The process of getting to the mission field can be complex and frustrating. Sessions should be proactive in monitoring or managing (as appropriate) the arrangements. Candidates should be made aware that obtaining visas or information from the field can be a slow process.

It is the responsibility of the sending session to discuss and implement a general preparation program for the candidates to undertake prior to serving on the mission field. While neither exhaustive nor compulsory, examples of matters that may be considered for inclusion in a general preparation program include:

- Missionary studies;
- Studies on teaching in a missionary context;
- Examining attitude, motivation, spirituality, personality and gifts.

The sending session should consult with the OMB regarding the general preparation program, and ascertain whether OMB can provide information and/or a general induction to the work undertaken on the mission field.

See Section 6 for further details.

It is the responsibility of the sending session to ensure there is an agreed-to and signed Secondment agreement between the sending church and the mission agency (including job description) prior to the missionary departing for the mission field. If OMB support is provided, the OMB will draft a Memorandum of Understanding between the sending church and the OMB; this will cover (among other things) relevant synodical guidelines, financial support arrangements, handling of gifts, reporting requirements, and any deputation requirements.

Please refer to check list in Section 11.

- Commissioning the Long-term Missionary

All long-term missionaries should be formally sent off with a commissioning service, conducted by the (appointed) sending church. The missionary (with spouse and family, if married) remains under the spiritual oversight of the sending church. If ordained, he is considered an office-bearer in that church. The missionary (family) in that way represents the sending church in serving the wider body of Christ overseas.

The commissioning service assures the missionary that he has been sent and puts the congregation under obligation to support the missionary enterprise fully.

- Supporting Workers on the Field

It is the responsibility of the session of the sending church to:

- To ensure that adequate levels of support are being given to those sent out from the local church, and to coordinate such support. (Support includes intercessory prayer, regular communication, and specific encouragement of missionaries - see also the Appendix 1 'Serving as Senders'). At least annually, the session of the sending church should discuss with the missionary any changes in circumstances which may affect the amount of financial support needed. A clause to this effect should be included as part of the MOU between OMB and the sending church.
- To ensure that spiritual oversight for the missionary on the field is provided insofar as possible.
- To keep the OMB informed of any developments that impact the relationship between missionary and sending church.
- To work in liaison with OMB where appropriate and feasible.
- To set priority areas for any local funds allocated to missions (over and above the OMB quota) and administer these funds accordingly.
- To arrange or assist the missionary in arranging suitable deputation meetings upon his/her return from the field. Such promotion of mission work through personal contact with those who have been on the field benefits other churches as well as the sending church.

- To arrange furlough - see Section 7.
- To ensure spiritual, moral and practical support is given to the missionary in adjusting after returning from the field, either on furlough or on cessation of overseas assignment.

Sessions are encouraged to consider delegating or sharing some of the above responsibilities with a local missions committee (see Section 11).

Please refer to check list in Appendix 4.

• Returning Home and Resettlement

The sending church has a responsibility to help and counsel the returning missionary through the resettling period (See the Appendix 1: 'Serving as Senders'). Sessions are encouraged to provide close pastoral oversight of missionaries (including members having returned from very short mission experience trips) on their return and for some time after. They will normally come back with enthusiasm for the work and often will have experienced increased fervour in their faith during their time away. In large or subtle ways, they and/or their attitudes will have changed and sometimes they perceive (gradually or otherwise) an apathy on the part of themselves or others on their return — 'the need is so great, what am I or others doing about it?' Other members will 'slot back in' to their regular way of life, having no expectation of further service, though they may be slightly unsettled for a time. Differences in cultures can be stark; some find it difficult re-adjusting to their own culture.

It is important to encourage members returning from the field (and all congregation members) to serve the Lord as He wills. While not stifling any desire or enthusiasm for service by the returning member it is important, should there be a desire for further service, to allow a 'cooling down' period to wait upon the Lord for his guidance. There are also many practical matters to consider including the member's suitability for further work (and what type), the amount of training and preparation required, the resources available to the member, family, church, and OMB; and the priorities of the session and OMB. Therefore, for members who may desire to do further service (immediately or in the near future), it is important to counsel them that the Lord will open the way to His work in His time, and to encourage them in local service and equipping themselves.

Section 4: Encouragement of Mission Awareness

It is essential that the church remains "tuned in" to the Master's call to the harvest field (Matthew 9:37, 38). All too easily the church's first love can grow cold (Revelations 2:4). Rekindling that love will also stir greater mission awareness in our hearts.

- Active Support of RCNZ Missionaries by Local Churches

Regular news from the field keeps church members informed about the needs of the missionaries and the indigenous people they are involved with. Response could come in the form of support in prayer, giving, or going.

Mission news put before the congregation may also stimulate a greater willingness and desire for local outreach.

Sending parcels for both missionaries and native believers is a practical way of showing Christian love and mercy.

Email and other forms of electronic communication are encouraged though it must be remembered that those working in "closed" countries may have this communication scrutinized. Communication with them will require sensitivity on behalf of the senders.

- Prayer for Mission Workers and Organisations

The OMB will include news and prayer requests of a general nature in its information bulletins to all churches.

The churches, via their sessions, missions committee, or individuals are encouraged to seek contact with the OMB when appropriate, in their efforts to promote awareness of missions among their members.

- Training and Recruitment

Those who have an interest in missions should be encouraged to:

- Make their mission interest and desire known to their local session.
- Fellowship with others who have an interest in cross-cultural mission.
- Become involved in cross-cultural groups such as Operation Friendship and Overseas Christian fellowship (OCF) to gain cross cultural experience.

Section 5: Policy on the Selection of Mission Candidates

Who should be sent to engage in mission work on the church's behalf? Should we be happy with anyone who offers himself/herself? Good missionary personnel are hard to come by and not many make themselves available. Did not the Lord Himself say "The harvest is plentiful, but the workers are few" (Matthew 9:37)?

That's still true! So, we should follow our Lord's advice to pray to the Lord of the harvest, that he may send out workers into His harvest field. Also, it is biblical to have sound requirements for such workers.

- General Requirements of Candidates

- Commitment to the Lord

The candidate for missionary service should be a person of character beyond reproach, having spiritual maturity and with a deep personal commitment to the Lord. He/she should be a person of prayer, who feeds daily on the Word of God, and who displays a servant attitude, submissive to those who have spiritual authority in the Church.

- Commitment to the Reformed Faith

The candidate must be committed to the Reformed faith and have a working knowledge of that belief. They should express agreement with the doctrines of grace, with a matching gracious spirit. They must evidence a Christian world-view encompassing all aspects of life.

- Commitment to the local church

The candidate should be a communicant member of their church and be respected in the church as one who has a zeal for evangelism, proven Christian service and involvement, and who contributes financially to the church and missions. They should evidence gifting in one or more areas of local church ministry.

- Commitment to further training and wider ministry

The candidate must be willing to be trained adequately for the specific aspects of mission work he/she will be engaged in. While experience in cross-cultural interaction will be helpful, there should be a willingness to learn a new language and adapt to a new culture. The candidate should be prepared to undertake courses advised by his/her Session or the OMB and go to a field designated by the OMB and work under the supervision of others.

- The Missionary Call Defined

Within the OMB strategy we recognise a two-fold distinction in long-term missions:

- The direct gospel proclamation, and
- Specialist missionary assistance.

The selection of candidates for the former (A) would include ordination to the ministry of the Word and sacraments. The latter (B) also includes a “call”, which should be directed as follows:

While difficult to define, there can be some strong indicators that God has placed a call on somebody's life. Reformed churches believe the Bible teaches that a call to such a service is made up of two components.

- God impresses His call on the person's life by the Holy Spirit through Scripture, the person's conscience, and circumstances (although these and other means may be also used to test the validity of a call).
- God works through the rest of the congregation and leadership of the church in recognising this call and affirming it. The missionary is then sent out by the local church.

Section 6: Policy on Missionary Training

Training to be a missionary is not to be seen as a mere formality. They are ambassadors for Christ with the message of reconciliation for the world. The apostles of Christ received practical training throughout the three years of our Lord's ministry on earth. After that their training continued under the tutelage of the Holy Spirit the Counsellor.

Just as proper qualification for secular vocations is expected, the church no less should emphasise the need for suitable training by missionary personnel.

• Initial Training at the Local Level

Sessions shall encourage those who express an interest in cross-cultural missions to begin training locally. This training can occur in two main ways:

- The candidate should be encouraged to begin their missionary preparation by becoming involved in a similar type of work to that which they intend to be doing on the mission field. This may involve being active in community work in a poorer part of town or becoming involved in some part of the church's ministry or the ministry of a suitable organisation within the city.
- The general preparation for missionary work depends very much on the type of mission work to be undertaken, and the locality of the field. It will be helpful to be in consultation, where possible, with the relevant mission board or agency regarding this.

It is essential to know the message of the gospel and how to communicate it, as well as having an awareness of the cultural/ethical/religious context of the people approached with the gospel. We recommend getting to know people of the "target" culture/nationality while still at home. In our larger towns, there may be chances to meet students/migrants/refugees from the intended nation. There are ways to do this, such as tutoring English or taking part in some of the friendship schemes available (e.g. Operation Friendship with overseas tertiary students).

This is quite important, as sometimes people will have a rather romantic view of mission and the people they are going to, which can be corrected by contact with real live people from their chosen field.

Further, basic first aid knowledge and practical "handyman's" skills are always valuable.

- Full-time Training

Sessions are encouraged to release candidates from any active duties within the Church to ensure they can adequately prepare for the mission field through full-time training.

Candidates seeking to serve in a different cultural setting should undertake cross-cultural training.

In order to be effective in communicating the gospel, long-term missionaries who are not ordained ministers should generally undertake an accredited course of Bible training, even if they are going as missionary assistants, working in professional positions such as teacher, engineer, technician, medic etc.

Candidates specifically involved in Bible translation require a knowledge of linguistics, as well as a sound knowledge of the biblical languages.

Those candidates who are called to help establish or assist indigenous churches should undertake a theology or divinity degree, and experience in pastoral work is to be recommended.

- Financial Support for Missionary Training

Financial assistance is usually decided on an individual basis according to the particular needs and circumstances of the individuals. Candidates should discuss any financial needs with the local session.

Section 7: Policy on Furlough and Deputation

The MOU between the OMB (or foreign mission agency) and the Sending Church must include specification of furlough and deputation details.

- Definitions

Furlough refers to a break from missionary service on the field at the end of a specified term of service. The missionary will usually return to their home country for a period of rest, deputation, and possibly professional development. Furlough is provided for the missionary in lieu of the Long-Service Leave provided for a minister serving in the RCNZ.

Deputation refers to a period (sometimes called “home-assignment”) when the missionary is off the field to speak to supporting congregations in order to promote the work and give a first-hand account of how it is developing.

- Purpose of Furlough:

- Personal Rest

One of the purposes of a furlough is for the missionary to “recharge batteries.” When planning furlough, sufficient time should be allowed for simple relaxation and time with immediate family as well as finding opportunities to visit and renew relationships with extended family and friends. Normally the first month of furlough is taken as the annual leave entitlement for that year.

- Spiritual Renewal

Furlough is a good time to take a class or attend a conference for spiritual renewal or to enhance a particular area of ministry. This is also a time for prayerful preparation for future work.

- Medical Examination

During normal furlough periods, the missionary and their dependents should each undergo a thorough medical examination. The sending Session and OMB must be made aware of any issues that could impact on performance during a future term of service. Further medical examination may be required before returning to the field.

- Debriefing

Within the first 2 months of furlough the sending Session will coordinate a debriefing session(s) together with OMB representatives, or with the OMB as a whole and Session representatives. There may be a requirement for the missionary to undergo a particular program or other activity before returning to the field.

- Deputation

During furlough the missionary is expected to engage in deputation work:

- Visit all the RCNZ churches to help maintain and develop prayer and emotional support as well as financial support. These visits may be spread across the course of their mission term.
- Visiting other supporting or interested churches to foster understanding and support of the missionary's particular ministry and the wider task of missionaries (see Appendix 3.5) in the situation of secondment).
- Spend a substantial portion of the furlough with and within the sending Church to renew connections with them, using their gifts and talents within the body of believers.

The sending church, in consultation with the OMB, has a responsibility to organise the deputation activities.

- Annual Leave

It is recommended that the annual leave entitlement be used up each year to provide regular refreshment, but a modest amount of holding leave over to a following year is permitted. The missionary must work with the Mission to ensure that provision is made to cover for absence on the field during the holiday period.

- Health Furlough

Under appropriate conditions, the missionary may request, or the OMB /sending church session may direct, a break from the field owing to health reasons. A medical review by two physicians will normally be required. Any subsequent decisions will be made after consultations between the session, OMB and the missionary.

- Logistics of Furlough:

- Timing and frequency

In consultation with the missionary and sending Church, the OMB approves the timing of furlough. The typical term of service and the corresponding length of a furlough is: 3-year term of service = 22 weeks furlough. As outlined above, this includes the missionary's annual leave entitlement for that year, as well as a period of deputation. In the situation where the missionary is serving an independent organisation or associated with another mission agency, the furlough timing should be in accordance with that recommended by the agency (see Section 10, on secondment).

- Preparation

To properly prepare for a continuation of the missionary's ministry, and to set up arrangements for practical support while in NZ, furlough planning should be a collaborative effort.

One year before the anticipated furlough, the missionary should begin communicating with the sending Church, who will liaise with the OMB to assess the potential plans. Discussions will include:

- The missionary's view regarding mission strategy, future directions of ministry, and the effect furlough will have on these issues
- Field issues
- Interpersonal relationships on the field
- Family needs during furlough (housing/accommodation, vehicle, any necessary adjustment to stipend to account for living in NZ etc. which must be arranged by the sending Church).

At least six months before scheduled furlough, the arrival and departure dates should be finalised in order to allow sufficient time for scheduling specific activities such as deputation. The first and last months are generally designated for rest, family visits, and medical appointments. The remaining furlough time should be devoted to activities that enhance spiritual and professional development.

One month prior to furlough, the sending Session should have a final planning discussion with the missionary to ensure all plans are in place. The OMB must be informed of the readiness of the plans.

- Finances While on Furlough

- Additional Employment

If the missionary desires to have additional employment during furlough, he/she must receive written permission from the sending Session. If stipend is continued during furlough, all income received from additional employment must be deposited with the sending church and will be applied to the funding of the missionary's direct support. Missionary wives may engage in secular work during furlough as long as it does not interfere with the family's home ministry.

- Honorariums

If monetary gifts are received by any party to help with travel expenses related to deputation, they must be passed on to the OMB to defray deputation costs. If a missionary receives personal gifts they may be kept and there is no need to report or make a record of these. Donors do not receive a charitable tax deduction for personal gifts.

- Returning to the Field

Before the missionary leaves the field for a furlough, the OMB may send the Mission a questionnaire about their performance and may request their feedback regarding their return to the field. The OMB may also consult with the national church on the field regarding the missionary's return to service on the field. The process must be transparent. Before returning to the field for a successive term, the OMB will complete an evaluation of the missionary's contribution to the wider work on the field. In doing so they will seek input from various parties, and, in consultation with the sending church session will make the final decision whether or not the missionary should return to the field.

By the end of furlough, the missionary and his/her family will have received medical examinations as well as debriefings. Any issues that may have arisen during (or prior to) furlough must be resolved before the missionary returns to the field.

If the missionary unilaterally decides not to return to the field or to delay return to the field at this time, this must be discussed as soon as possible with the sending church session who will decide on an appropriate course of action in consultation with the OMB.

Section 8: Policy on Financial Support

- Guidelines regarding funding of longer-term Missionaries

The general principle for financial support being received from the OMB is that the sending church commits itself to paying as much as it is able, and then requests OMB to provide the remainder. Unforeseen costs are paid jointly by the local church and the OMB. If increased support from the OMB is required for an existing missionary, this should normally be advised five months before the start of the next financial year.

The following financial arrangements are for the purpose of responsible stewardship. The sending church must consider that the worker is worthy of his/her wages and those sent out by the church are the responsibility of the sending church. In all these things the church and missionary exercise faith in a gracious, providing God.

- The degree of OMB financial support will depend on alternative sources of support (e.g. support from oneself, family, the local church, and other organisations), the cost of living of the place where the candidate is going, their status as married or single and with or without dependants.
- The OMB will take an active role in providing the sending church with financial advice. The sending church should seek advice from the OMB when making major financial decisions regarding its mission personnel. The sending church is to inform the OMB of the missionary's financial support levels at least annually or as requested by the OMB.
- The financial arrangements for a missionary who has a lifelong calling of ordained service to the Church of Jesus Christ shall include a contribution toward the RCNZ Emeritus Savings Fund. Other provisions will need to be made for missionaries who are not eligible for the RCNZ Emeritus Savings Fund.

Please also refer to the check list in Appendix 4.

- Financing of Short-term Missions

Normally funds for short-term missions will be raised by the individual wishing to go. Any further financial support required may be discussed and decided upon, on an individual basis, by the local session and/or the local missions committee. Where the short-term trip is undertaken as a training ground for long-term service, the OMB may be able to assist. While it is within the mandate for the OMB to support short-term missionaries, this is on an exceptional basis and should not generally be expected.

- Personal donations to Missionaries

Donations which are received by either the sending church or OMB and which are clearly designated as being for the personal use of a particular missionary are to be passed directly to that missionary. This matter should be addressed in the MOU between the OMB and the sending church.

- OMB Quota

The "quota" is the amount which the churches as a whole covenant to contribute for overseas mission work. The amount is decided on at each Synod, usually on the basis of estimations and calculations projected by the OMB. Once the amount is established, the OMB annually requests from each church the appropriate percentage according to its number of communicant members. These percentages are published in the RCNZ

Yearbook of the denomination.

While the OMB is free to request from the churches an amount less than the set quota, if a necessity arises to request a greater amount on any particular year in between synods, the OMB must liaise with the Synodical Interim Committee.

Following this, the OMB will contact all of the churches, explain the situation, and seek the approval from the majority. The same process should be followed for any departure from, or addition to, OMB's mandate during the period in between synods. It must be added that the churches expect that such a process would only be invoked for urgent, unforeseen situations that simply cannot wait until the next synod.

Financial Shortfall Scenarios

- In the case of an emergency involving immediate danger to life or property not covered by any insurance policy or in the Memorandum of Understanding, any associated costs will be met by the OMB from funds held or by quota. However, the understanding is that the OMB and sending church will have in place appropriate insurance cover for missionaries and property. However, sometimes the cost of insurance is so prohibitive that it may be best to shoulder the risk; in such cases, the churches should be immediately advised of the nature and severity of the risk.
- Subject to clause 3, in the case of financial shortfall the OMB may take any of the following steps:
  - Where the OMB has surplus funds it may choose, in its sole discretion, to cover some or all of the shortfall;
  - The OMB may write to the churches explaining the situation and seeking donations.
  - The OMB may request the Synodical Interim Committee for approval to raise funds by way of quota to cover some or all of that shortfall.
- In the case of cost overruns or expenses which were reasonably foreseeable, but the sending church failed to anticipate, these will be the responsibility of the sending church. However, the sending church may request the OMB or other churches for financial assistance; it will be up to the OMB and/or each church to determine whether to assist and how much assistance to provide.
- For the purposes of clause 3, the OMB will have the responsibility to determine which cost overruns or extra expenses were reasonably foreseeable by the sending church.

- The Church's Tithe to Missions

Local churches are encouraged to set aside a fixed percentage of their annual budget, in addition to the OMB quota, to use in supporting and promoting the cause of the gospel of Christ in mission work. For sending churches, this 'extra' tithe, and adherence to the guideline in section 8.1, will demonstrate that they take their sending and caring responsibilities seriously.

Section 9: Short-term Missions

Not every person can be committed to long-term mission work. Short-term work, rightly motivated, is a valid expression of the church's commitment to missions. In fact, this option could multiply the number and variety of workers considerably and could well add to the number of long-term workers eventually.

• Definition of a Short-term Mission

A short-term mission can last anywhere from one week to two years, although it is typically considered to be from three to six months.

Apart from the time duration, the very nature and aims of a short-term mission may vary considerably.

Obviously, the requisite finance, preparation time and general commitment of the missionary will vary considerably depending on the nature of the mission work.

• Guidelines for Short-term Missions

Sessions will encourage and counsel those who express an interest and desire for short-term mission, and, at their discretion, give them practical aid. Sessions will guide the individual to choose a suitable mission project. The suitability of the mission project should be evaluated in terms of principles set out in Appendix 3 (“The Synodical Regulations for Secondment”).

Sessions should consider, as part of their pastoral care for the members of the church, the spiritual benefits that may result for the one who participates in a short-term mission project. This is a strong reason for sessions to give pastoral consideration to encouraging and supporting this type of mission work.

Sessions will also encourage short-term missionaries by ensuring that the congregation is informed of that person's needs, and by encouraging prayer for the individual leading up to, and during, the short-term mission. Short-term missionaries should:

- Be committed to the Lord and to the Reformed faith, and to his/her local church.
- Display zeal for Christian service and evangelism.
- Have a sincere interest in missions.
- Be suited or equipped for the role they want to fill and be prepared to use their skills for the furthering of the gospel on the mission field.

- Be prepared to use their experiences to encourage and inform others on their return.
- Be willing to receive guidance from their session as to an appropriate church or mission organisation to serve with
- Have parental support or approval, where applicable.

Section 10: Policy on Secondment

Secondment is the channelling of the RCNZ mission workers into mission projects or fields not directly supervised by the RCNZ. Our mission workers would be seconded to the church or mission agency which supervises the project or field to which they will be sent.

The provision of secondment allows missionaries to serve in a wider range of mission work than that organised by the OMB. Where possible, secondment will be to sister churches or other ICRC churches, in line with OMB's clear preference for working with Reformed Churches and their mission agencies. Where it is not possible or practical to channel members into these areas, they may be seconded to work with another mission organisation or church under the conditions in Appendix 3. Bear in mind that missionaries working for non-Reformed agencies may encounter difficulties due to differences in world and life views and the practice of their faith.

See Appendix 3 for Synodical Regulations about Secondment.

Section 11: Missions Committees in the Local Churches

We live in an age in which "specialists" (people dedicated to specific roles) are a common element in the workforce. The task-force of God's Kingdom on a local level could certainly benefit from the dedicated services of a missions committee. It could become the missions "hub" of the local congregation.

- Purpose of a Missions Committee in the Local Church

Section 3 represents an awesome task for sessions, one for which they may not have the personnel resources or specialist expertise to handle. A missions committee, appointed and under the oversight of session, would free up sessions from much of the work load. We strongly recommend that sessions form such a committee, especially if the church membership has some highly motivated, experienced and capable people in their ranks. It is suggested that this committee include someone from Session (such as a missions elder - see section 11.2).

Feedback from the mission field is that there is often a need for timely and efficient decision-making. There have been occasions where delays in decision-making have delayed necessary works on the mission field, or adversely impacted on the care and well-being of mission field workers. Session need not make every decision relating to the care and needs of mission field candidates and workers, or works on the mission field. There is potential to promote timely and efficient decision-making by defining an appropriate range of matters (for example, day to day administrative decision-making and care) that can be delegated to a missions committee.

Sessions are encouraged to consider and set out the scope of authority they wish to delegate to the missions committee, taking into account:

- the range of responsibilities for local sessions as set out in section 3 above, including day to day care and support;
- the experience and capability of missions committee members to carry out (some of) those responsibilities under delegation;
- the specific needs of mission field candidates and workers;
- the type, frequency and timeliness of care to be provided for mission field candidates and workers;
- the desirability of decisions relating to the mission field being made without undue delay.

Examples of potential responsibilities that sessions could delegate to a missions committee are listed in clause 11.5 and appendix 4.

The missions committee is encouraged to communicate with the OMB.

The following sections are suggestions as to the make-up and tasks of such a committee.

- Missions Elder

Session could appoint a "missions elder" to be part of the missions committee. He must have an interest in missions and would provide oversight, guidance, and encouragement to the committee on behalf of session.

- Responsibilities of the Convener of the Missions Committee

- Schedule regular meetings of the committee and set the agenda.
- Ensure that a committee member acts upon the decisions of the committee.
- Ensure there is good communication with session, including giving minutes of committee meetings to the clerk and missions elder.
- Bring enthusiasm to the task and set aside time for this role.

- Members of the Missions Committee

The members of the Missions Committee should be familiar with the RCNZ Missions Policy Handbook and mission activity of the RCNZ and should have a desire to learn about mission work in general. It is particularly beneficial to have members with prior experience in mission work and/or first-hand familiarity with relevant mission fields.

- Potential responsibilities of the Missions Committee

- To help sessions in some of the responsibilities outlined in Section 3.
- To act as advisers to session on mission matters.
- To research opportunities and mission fields.
- To promote the work of missions
- To keep in contact with similar mission committees within our denomination.
- To keep up to date with general mission news from around the world through various publications.

- To meet on a regular basis.
- To provide day to day care and support to missionaries (e.g. via a dedicated care team forming part of the committee).

Closing Comments

The forward-going thrust of the gospel into every corner of this world is one of the most exciting happenings in the 20th Century and continues as we begin the 21st Century. It is happening despite enormous opposition from secularism, humanism and other religions. Moreover, it is happening in spite of the lukewarm-ness and worldliness of many sections in the world-wide church of the Lord Jesus Christ.

It is a great testimony to the fact that "the gates of hell" cannot overwhelm the church which Christ Jesus is building! It is a powerful assurance to Christians world-wide that it is still worthwhile to lift up a banner for the only Hope of mankind, even when the church is slighted in today's society.

It is vitally important that we encourage each other to become more mission- minded. We need constantly to pray that God would give us a 'heart' for the world He loves, and a burden to see it won for Christ. But we cannot pray "Thy Kingdom come, Thy will be done" without also being prepared to put our lives on the line for our Saviour, Jesus Christ. As his disciples, we must obey when he calls us - and for some of us that will mean following his call to an overseas mission field.

For the local church, obedience to the Great Commission is an indication of spiritual health. Apart from having a commitment to see its members become established in the faith and taking up responsibilities in the local church, there must also be a commitment to challenging those same saints with God's call to make disciples of all nations. We need joyfully to embrace the task of training our best (as well as seeking to provide opportunities for them), in order that they may be sent out to work full-time in God's Kingdom, in that place to which He calls them.

Hopefully, this handbook has given some direction to these great tasks, sowing a few new ideas and providing a clear framework within which our churches can work together in their missionary endeavours. May God help us to have a vital part to play in reaching every people group in the world with the Gospel, so that ultimately that mighty chorus might be raised in honour of His Beloved Son:

"You are worthy ..... because You were slain, and with Your blood You purchased men for God from every tribe and language and people and nation..."
Revelation 5.9

Appendix 1

Serving as Senders

This appendix is a review of a book of the above title by Neal Pirolo. This book contains some useful information for prospective missionaries, session members and support team members alike. “And how can they preach unless they are sent?” Romans 10:15. It is clearly shown in the Bible that missionaries do not go out on their own initiative with no support from a fellowship of believers and with no accountability towards this group.

A Biblical Foundation

In Romans 10 the apostle Paul established the vitality of cross-cultural outreach on the following two levels of involvement: Those who go and those who serve as senders. A cross cultural worker needs the support of a team of people while he/she is preparing to go, while he/she is on the field and when he/she returns home. Session and missionary together decide on: Particular jobs that the support team need to do and who will do them (see “Areas of Support”), who will lead the team and liaise with session (preferably a session member).

The team must be made up of people committed to support for the whole term of the mission work. The support team regularly reports to session, and always works under the direction and authority of the session, since it the church which is responsible for sending the missionary.

AREAS OF SUPPORT

- MORAL SUPPORT

Solid Moral Support can be given by actively listening to what your missionary is saying. This involves really putting effort into trying to understand the issues and deep-down feelings of your missionary rather than just responding to what the surface words are saying. Just being there to listen.

- LOGISTICS SUPPORT

Logistic support deals with handling the nuts and bolts.
Areas that need to be covered are:

- managing business affairs
- attending to personal details
- confirming and encouraging spiritual growth
- maintaining accountability in ministry.

- FINANCIAL SUPPORT

The Lord has most certainly been merciful to us in New Zealand and has blessed us in abundance, also financially. The question is, what are we doing with these blessings to make His salvation known among the nations?

- PRAYER SUPPORT

Paul in Ephesians 6 identifies two major weapons of our warfare: The Sword of the Spirit and Prayer. Paul, as a missionary of the first century was continually calling on the churches for prayer support. Paul simply stated in both 1 & 2 Thessalonians and in Hebrews “Brethren, pray for us.”

The following is a list of prayer needs which will help Christians to pray effectively for their missionaries.

- Adjusting to the new language, different foods, new customs etc.
  - Protection in travel, health, accidents, dangerous situations.
  - Parents' concerns for their children's health, schooling, friendships.
  - Housing accommodations, lack of privacy, differences in living standards, lack of accustomed conveniences.
  - Loneliness, homesickness, lack of accustomed fellowship with others.
  - Interpersonal relationships
  - Depending on the faithfulness of others to meet one's financial needs.
  - Effectiveness in ministry, whatever the assignment.
  - Functioning of the tools of ministry.
  - Lack of visible results; the “ploughing, planting and watering” stages can go on for years!
  - The people being ministered to, the national Christians, the leaders of the country.
  - Need for stability, wisdom, compassion, self-discipline, boldness, power, love, to be filled with the Spirit of God.
- COMMUNICATION SUPPORT
When a person or family arrives on the field to establish their new routine, real loneliness can set in - a feeling of isolation, of being out-of-it.

Communication support can be done in many different ways. Children should also be encouraged to write to the children in missionary families. This will also encourage them to become aware of and involved in missions.

- RE-ENTRY SUPPORT
This is the support given to help your missionary and his/her family integrate back into the church fellowship, work and society. Re-entry can be the hardest part of an overseas experience. There is an initial shock in returning home. Attitudes have changed; technology has changed; the pace of life is so fast. Even the church isn't how you remember it. The re-entry support person or team needs to prepare a number of logistical details prior to the missionaries home coming.

This is the full circle of support you can offer to your cross-cultural worker as you express your love and concern for him while he/she is preparing to go, while he/she is on the field and when he/she returns back home.

Appendix 2

Joint Missionary Support with an ICRC or Sister Church

Statement of Understanding between Overseas Mission Board & the Mission Board of a Sister/ICRC Church Concerning Joint Missionary Support

- The Overseas Mission Board (hereafter OMB) of the Reformed Churches of New Zealand may co-operate with the Mission Board of a Sister/ICRC Church (hereafter named the Supervising Mission Board) in the joint support of any missionary family or families (hereafter, missionary) working with the Supervising Mission Board as the OMB resources and vision permit.
- The OMB will decide who will be the missionary recipient and the amount of that support in consultation with the Supervising Mission Board and will annually forward the support directly to the Supervising Mission Board for its distribution.
- The missionary who receives partial support from OMB will forward to OMB all reports and prayer letters so as to inform and challenge.
- Decisions relating to the posting or ministry of the missionaries involved will be the sole responsibility of the Supervising Mission Board. Input for these decisions may be sought from the OMB but such will normally be of an advisory nature only. Information concerning such decisions will be provided to the OMB.
  - The board of the Supervising Mission Board and its agencies shall exercise jurisdiction over personnel called or commissioned by local churches under the following conditions: The agency director is specifically responsible for the performance of the agency personnel in the duties assigned to them, including their doctrine and life in so far as these bear upon their functioning in their agency assignments. The consistories of local churches on the field, or session of local Reformed Churches in New Zealand in which the membership of agency personnel is lodged, also have supervision over their members' doctrine and life in so far as these bear upon church membership or office.
  - The consistory or session at which the missionary's membership is lodged, and which subsequently calls and commissions him, shall be determined in consultation with the missionary, the mission agencies (the Supervising Mission Board & OMB) and the calling church. As a rule, the consistory/session within the denomination to which the missionary belongs shall be appointed as the calling church. Where there are existing arrangements, these shall be respected and, ordinarily, upheld.
- Home service activity of the missionary will be under the direct supervision of the Supervising Mission Board and will, as a rule, allow for a trip to New Zealand every other term of service. Deputation expenses directly related to OMB will be met by OMB. OMB, in consultation with the Supervising Mission Board and the missionary, will ordinarily contribute to the cost of travel to and from New Zealand. On alternate home service periods the missionary will be asked to do deputation work in the country of the Supervising Mission Board. Travel to and from New Zealand during that period would be during the vacation period and would be at personal expense to the missionary.

Appendix 3

Synodical Regulations for Secondment (Acts of Synod 1995)

Arrangements for Secondment to (Non-Reformed) Mission Agencies

- That for the sake of the spiritual supervision of the missionary, he/she shall have dual membership status with both the RCNZ and the mission organisation.
- That his home congregation in New Zealand be the sending Church.
- That his appointment be subject to the approval of both the mission and the OMB in accordance with the standards established by each agency.
- That the missionary participates in all necessary candidate training programmes run by the mission.
- That during times of furlough, the missionary is expected to do deputation work in the RCNZ to be organised by the OMB alongside the deputation work or speaking engagements he may be asked to do for the mission organisation. Furlough planning is to be arranged mutually by the missionary, the OMB and the mission. (Note: During this time, their holistic support continues to be the responsibility of the sending church.)
- That the home congregation provide as much financial support as it is able to provide, the remainder being requested from the OMB. In the case of short term (probationary) mission workers, the extent of the support of the missionary be considered on the merits of each case. (Specific details relating to the finances and support are to be mutually agreed on by the mission, the OMB and the home congregation).
- That the home session retain responsibility for pastoral care and spiritual oversight, and where possible share this with a suitable church in the area in which the missionary will be working. This oversight is to be shared to a lesser degree with the field director of the mission. In the absence of a suitable church in the area, or supplementary to it, the OMB should consider other means to provide spiritual counsel, such as missionaries or ministers passing by on their way to or from the RCNZ or their sister churches.

- That a missionary not be expected to undertake any activities or teaching that would be in conflict with the Scriptures or the Reformed confessions, and that he have complete liberty to present the Gospel as expressed in the confessional standards of the RCNZ.
- That final oversight and discipline with respect to the missionary's doctrine and life rests with the appropriate church courts of the RCNZ.
- That the mission be responsible for directing the activities while on the field, and that while working there the missionary is to be subject to the policies and stated aims of the mission, and that in matters in which the missionary feels aggrieved, the OMB may be called upon to seek clarification from both parties.
- That in all matters concerning the re-assignment or function, furlough, or termination of the work of a missionary, no decision be taken by any party without prior consultation and agreement.
- That an annual confidential report be forwarded to the home session providing at least an assessment of performance together with any recommendations for further service.

We as an OMB believe that these guidelines as they stand:

- are sufficient to guard the integrity of reformed mission work in a faith mission or interdenominational mission (operating on a faith mission principle) context;
- open doors of opportunity which otherwise would remain closed;
- safeguard our missionaries from perils which often face faith or interdenominational mission workers (such as lack of finance, lack of accountability, lack of communication with the sending church). (These regulations are current as from October, 1995)

Assessing (Non-reformed) Mission Agencies

Synod 1992 (Art. 51d) also agreed to the following provisional procedure:

- If a person desires to enter a specific mission work administered by a (not overtly Reformed) mission agency or organisation, they should supply to the home session sufficient information for it to be able to make an informed assessment of the mission and the work the applicant would be involved in. Such information should include:
  - Justification for involvement.
  - Statement of the mission agency's aims and purposes (where applicable).
  - The mission agency's statement of faith (where applicable).
  - Present field and areas of ministry of the mission agency.
  - A job description of the work the applicant would be doing.

- The local session should investigate and evaluate the mission agency, the specific field, the job description, and the suitability of the candidate. If they are satisfied, they may make a recommendation to the OMB requesting financial support, supplying the relevant documentation, including a copy of the candidate's application to the mission.
- The OMB should also evaluate the mission and the applicant, and, if deemed necessary, conduct interviews with the applicant, the session and the mission. It will also ensure, as a secondary precaution, that there are no apparent anomalies that would compromise the worker or jeopardize the agency.
- If satisfied with the applicant and the mission agency, the OMB will, on behalf of the RCNZ, approve the candidate for the particular work of service.

Appendix 4

Practical Help for Sessions and Missions Committees

The following information has been included in the RCNZ Missions Handbook as a practical guide to mission work for a sending church. Sessions should give consideration on the extent to which it is desirable to delegate (or share) particular tasks and responsibilities to a missions committee.

• Practical Check List

Careful preparation needs to begin well in advance of departure (suggest 9-12 months)

- Approval and Costing
  - Proposal and endorsement of project through the correct channels.
  - Clear justification for the sending of those chosen, the field, and the agency.
  - Realistic budget and (proposed) means to meet the costs involved.
- Prior to the missionary's departure a comprehensive and workable budget is to be drawn up, which is to include such items as health insurance, tax, provision for currency fluctuations, increased costs, retirement and travel.
- Cultural preparation and courses
  - To gain familiarity with the workings of the Mission and the indigenous people.

- Language preparation and courses
- Insurance — Comprehensive Medical and Travel
- Geographical preparation
  - Climate, basic knowledge of the country and area to be visited.
- Health
  - A medical check-up will normally be required. If married, this applies also to his/her family.
  - Correct vaccinations (be sure) and sufficient time to receive them.
  - Additional medicines required on the field? (e.g. if travelling to other destinations as well).
  - Psychological or psycho-social assessments could be considered as appropriate.
- Airfares Travel and Transfers
  - Best ticket options allowing most flexibility and best value, booked well in advance.
  - Transport required en-route and/or upon arrival (International drivers licence?)
- Communication
  - Do you have adequate communication with all parties?
  - Communication channels need to be set up. Test them.
  - Is there any equipment required? Laptop, phone etc.
- House Sitting
  - Proper care put in place for belongings back home.
  - Existing financial commitments to consider (mortgage etc)

B Official Requirements

- Letter of 'Call' or 'Invitation' from the appropriate governing body, Mission, or both.
  - Session to draft and send formal letter.
  - Letter of Release required if from another congregation?
- If appropriate, a secondment agreement between the sending church and the mission/agency to which the missionary will go, must be finalised and signed by all parties before the missionary leaves. It must include a clear description of the lines of accountability, and procedures to be followed in resolving disputes.

- An MOU between the sending church and the OMB must be finalized and signed by both parties before the missionary leaves.
- JobDescription
  - Includes a clear mandate for the task(s) required.
  - Who is he/she responsible to on the field?
  - Disputes procedures?
- Visas and Work permits
Applied for well in advance, checked for sufficiency of time & accuracy etc.
- Support Group
  - Form a dedicated support group (e.g. a care team) and be prepared for ALL possibilities.
  - Nominate dedicated contact and back up contact person as part of the support group.
  - Set up channels for passing on communication e.g. to OMB, churches etc.
- Finances and Banking
  - Liaise with OMB regarding how the finances will operate. Other mission organisations operating on the field may be able to offer advice. Develop a comprehensive flow chart for all types of funds that need to be transmitted to the field, so that everybody is clear on how things will function.
  - Delineate the process for forwarding funds. Test that it works. Ensure there will be sufficient funds available for the missionary on arrival on the field.
  - Ensure that support is finalized for the entire term/period.
  - Additional (underwritten) funds should be made available to meet any unplanned emergencies or needs.
  - Specify how frequently stipend is to be paid.
- Specification of Deputation and Furlough frequency.
Ensure the details of furlough are spelled out in the MOU or secondment agreement.

- On the Field

- Oversight by the Elders
  - Would require regular nominated contact via electronic, voice and/or video communications where possible.
  - Are things going well on the field, and back home? Send church bulletins from back home and ensure others also contact the missionary regularly.
  - Specify the reporting requirements of the missionary – Reports sent to whom and how often?
- Requirements of the Missionary
  - Is there good two-way communication between you and the support group?
  - Is the work progressing to plan?
  - Is there anything required?
  - Are there any problems that require addressing?
- Requirements on the Field
  - Are the requirements of the field being communicated by the Missionary?
  - Are these requests necessary?
  - How can you appropriately evaluate these needs?
  - How and when can we meet them?

- Assessment and Return

- Re-entry into their own country (See also the Appendix 1 – ‘Serving as Senders’)
  - What to expect (possible culture shock, deflation after a high).
  - Regular contact from support persons and others.
- Evaluation of the Work
  - Request a full report of the work, asking for specific information pertaining to all aspects of the field.
  - Request the Mission to submit a report regarding your missionary.
  - Could and should you recommend continuance of this work?
  - How could further involvement in this mission be implemented?

- What can we learn to be better equipped for (DV) next time?
- Sending church to consider whether to carry on in their service?
- Finances
  - Have the 'books' been updated?
  - Are there any reimbursements required?

- Draft Secondment Letter

The Secondment Agreement which requires completion and signatures prior to departure to the field. This is an example of the kinds of matters to be included in such a document.

Official Secondment Agreement

Between the Reformed Church of _____ and (Mission Agency, Country and Location).

The Reformed Church of (church) with the knowledge, blessing and support of the Overseas Missions Board of the RCNZ does hereby agree to the secondment of (name) and his (wife/family) to the (Mission) in (Country and location) for a period from (date) through to (date) This is by call/invitation of the (Mission) for:- (State the official call/invitation from the Mission).
